Just picking up some fresh fruit and salad, skim milk and cheese would be great. There's still plenty of freezer food that we'll consume, plus leftovers from reception. The kids need the fruit and vegatables though.

And those steaks are great, so having them would be appreciated.

Otherwise, I'll just run to the store if the kids need anything else. Thanks!

Hello,

Of course I'm already thinking of food while the family is in town for the Open House. Just send me a shopping list if you'd like to have things purchased in advance. We'll need to purchase items for the Open House, so we'll be shopping at Foodland (A&P) and Costco. Let me know if you'd like steaks, chicken, etc..prepared for when you arrive on Wednesday.

Thank you,

Kris and I had a visit from Karen Knutsen, COS to Sen. Murkowski. We were able to ask her two questions:

1. What are the Senator's thoughts on AGIA

2. Is there truth to this rumor that Halcro spoke with her and her comment was that AGIA was a disaster.

Her response was that she is excited about AGIA, but concerned if the producers don't show up to play. She then said on the 2nd comment that the Senator's words can be parsed and misconstrued by others as well as the media. She reiterated that the Senator is optimistic about AGIA, just concerned about lack of producer cooperation.

Hi Denny,

This is Frank Bailey, not the Governor. Thanks so much for sending along. I'll get this in the hands of the folks who can do something with it.

As you can surmise, there is a very rigid process that must take its course before the State can really comment on issues specifically. I am not the expert on this issue, but my understanding is there is little that can be said during the evaluation process.

Again I really appreciate you speaking up from Fairbanks.

Governor Palin

Today at Lunch in Fairbanks I listened to Andrew Halcrow expound upon his opinion that the legislature 'caved' on the tax increase legislation and that AGIA will not only fail but delay a gas line for years to come. Of course the Alliance audience listened with open ears. I'm confident you and your team will prove him wrong. I would like to help in some small way with two suggestions.

Suggestion #1: I would encourage you personally to travel to DC and meet face to face with this administration in the very near future to prevent them from being negatively influenced against AGIA. (i.e to protect your back side).

At the luncheon, Halcrow scoffed at all bidders. He did say Trans Canada had the expertise to build the line but dismally fail to have sufficient assets. As long as the major oil companies won't commit during open season then their project is doomed. He also mentioned that Lisa Murkowski met with Bush's energy secretary who asked her about AGIA. Halcrow reported Lisa saying that the energy secretary sees AGIA as a complete failure and that they may as well forget ever getting Alaska gas. I'm wondering what kind of 'spin' she put on it?

I believe the major oil companies along with Senator Murkowski may be ganging up on you. They feel like they hold all the cards. With your enormous popularity with the people of Alaska as your credentials, you personally should represent us at a meeting face to face IN Washington DC to recruit the feds in support of your effort with AGIA. With the Energy Secretary's endorsement you would instantly empty ALL the wind from their sails. What a dynamic shift of power. Imagine President Bush AND Governor Palin teamed up facing the other side of the table!!!

If President Bush and/or the Secretary of Energy is serious about getting Alaska gas to the lower 48 to relieve the energy crisis all the Fed would have to do is become a major guarantor of the construction loan of 20 - 30 billion dollars to back a company like Trans Canada who has the expertise. There is a good argument why they should: The Tennessee Valley Authority was created years ago to resolve an energy crisis. Why not create a similar structure, some form of Alaska Gas authority backed with Federal dollars as the guarantor?

The best defense is a great offense. I suspect the major oil companies are intent upon keeping their 'power' position by treating Alaska as a backwater third world country. They may be are VERY busy whispering in the ears at the Federal level painting themselves to be the 'agrieved party' in the AGIA process. They mistakenly believe they hold all the high cards with their world class legal department to block AGIA in the courts for years. They are counting on Alaska remaining isolated and alone against them. If you are successful in recruiting the endorsement of the Bush Administration the entire power dynamic shifts completely. I believe that's the one thing they secretly fear.

The Bush Administration knows that one of the key's to saving face and achieving a credible exit strategy from the mid east crisis includes a successful program to reduce US dependence on foreign oil. I think the reason the Energy Secretary is so busy inquiring of Senator Murkowski about our progress is in support of that goal.

Suggestion #2: If the majors refuse to release their gas during an open season process there are some very compelling arguments for the state of Alaska to consider building an in-state gas line for our own use without their gas.

What the Bush administration, the major oil companies (and possibly our federal delegation) don't realize is that with a popular leader such as yourself we don't have to play ball with any of them. We could seriously inhibit Bush's energy policy. This is the second time around for me (I was paying close attention 30 years ago when the oil companies 'wined and dined' us to get the oil line). We are no longer country bumpkins. I don't think they realize that there are very good arguments in support of just keeping and utilizing our gas here at home in Alaska.

Can you imagine the possibilities for Alaskans for generations? Not only reduced energy costs for homes and businesses. With a plentiful supply of natural gas at tide water in Alaska the 'value added' petrochemical industries would have to come to us 'hat in hand' which would create a sustainable economy in Alaska, ,a healthy tax base, and quality, high paying jobs for our grand children (not just boom and bust pipeline wages)

I've found sometimes that the strongest negotiating position comes from not being afraid to lose. 'The only thing to fear is fear itself". If President Bush needs Alaska gas for his energy policy his administration needs to stand with us as a strong proponent of the AGIA process. I don't think they can afford politically to see us decide to keep our gas at home for our own economic well being.

Can you imagine the threat to their agendas if you, Governor Palin utilized your statewide credibility (and popularity) by beginning to talk publicly about the economic benefits of our own 24 inch line from Prudhoe to south central? If this is a poker game I don't think any of the three groups I've mentioned realize just how strong a hand Alaska is holding.

Thank you listening!

I believe the best long term investment is the health and safety of all Alaskans. Please support Comm. Jackson in her work with Health Care Strategies reform. I am also concerned about the number of Alaska Native folks who fall through the cracks in our urban services, and the lack of funding and the stringent controls on in-home services in rural Alaska that could enable elders and people with disabilities to remain in their own homes in the village of their choice.

Also, I believe you could be even more bold and ask for 75% oil tax. Afterall, who does it really belong to and who are the people suffering from the high costs?

I appreciate your dedication to the people of Alaska and all the work that you do.

In July when you signed the bill to add more people to our crime lab I thought things would quickly improve and our backlog of DNA samples would disappear. So far the only thing I've seen disappear is that stat from reports. I'll email the report separately. Someone decided that the state will no longer keep track of the number of convicted felon DNAs Alaska has entered in a year. I'm sure its because its an embarassment. It is only TRS.

Although we do have a current unfunded liability of more than $8 billion for the state's retirement systems -- $3.1 billion for the Teachers Retirement System and $5.4 billion for the Public Employees Retirement System, this proposal is only for TRS.

During the 2007 session, the legislature appropriated $270 million to school districts and the University of Alaska for TRS and $185 million to PERS employers.

The administration will continue to take action to reduce the entire liability.

But this proposal is for $450 million in funds from the FY08 surplus would be deposited to TRS to reduce the unfunded liability and provide future savings in the State's required contributions to TRS.

The TRS is almost completely funded with general fund dollars. Making a FY 08 general fund contribution to TRS will give the State the "biggest bang for the buck" on reducing the amount of general fund dollars necessary in the FY09 and future budgets for the TRS.

The projected savings to the state would be $43.1 million. The savings would continue each year until the unfunded liability is reduced to zero.

The net present value of the total savings over a 25-year period is $607 million.

Is it going to students and education, research, buildings or are we spending millions of dollars each year for administrators living a luxurious life?

It is time for some really hard accounting answers.

This brief provides relevant ECS data and resources to assist you with the education policy challenges that you currently face. We want you to consider ECS as an extra state team member who can deliver data, research and analysis for you.

This letter is being forwarded to you by Ann Rautio, your state liaison, whose phone number is below. Feel free to reach out for additional information or requests for service. At ECS, we stand ready to build a stronger relationship with you and other key education stakeholders in Alaska.

Sincerely,
Roger Sampson
ECS President

Kris,

I will be in Anchorage again Monday Dec 10 at the Sheraton again to attend the Supportive Housing Summit. It is from 8 am to 3 pm or so. Do you want me to extend a day or so and spend some time with you and/or the Governor? Let me know.

If that week doesn't work out, let me know when and even how often you would like me to come to Anchorage and I will be there. I don't mind coming to Anchorage!

Subject: Public Safety Strategic Plan

Mike and Governor

Commissioner Monegan called this afternoon to report that AST's strategic plan is posted now on their website. There has already been interest in it and Meg Baldino will be interviewing Holloway. Walt said the plan is designed to give troopers direction for the next 10 years. As with any plan, it is subject to change as needed.

The Alaska State Troopers' eight core missions in meeting these responsibilities as stated in the 2008-2017 Strategic Compass are:

1. Maintain public peace and order.
2. Enforce criminal laws and investigate violations of those laws.
3. Enforce traffic laws and regulations and investigate violations of those laws and regulations.
4. Conduct and manage search and rescue operations.
5. Support and assist other law enforcement and governmental agencies.
6. Investigate allegations of human abuse or neglect.
7. Respond to the concerns and inquiries of citizens.
8. Provide current and relevant training to law enforcement and criminal justice agencies.

It's about seven pages. I'll print copies.

MESSAGE:

This could as easily fall under Education, Transportation or Homeland Security.

Mrs. Palin,

I read with enthusiasm your press release announcing significant funding for important Education, Transportation and Alternative Energy projects. I am Professional Engineer working for GCI and the President and founder of the Alaska Electric Vehicle Association www.AlaskaEVA.org and have been doing lectures about the benefits and economics of driving electric vehicles. They are cleaner, more efficient, cheaper to maintain, and while they have limited range I've proven they can be most practical for daily driving within town. That and the fact that they are as you say "Part of that new world for that next generation". And to that end I will continue pursuing the education of folks on the benefits of electric drive transportation.

Almost two years ago I converted a 1988 Mitsubishi Mightymax pickup to electric and have been driving it daily since http://www.austinev.org/evalbum/756. I'm currently working on a 12 second electric dragster that will hit the track this spring http://www.austinev.org/evalbum/1093. I've inspired a couple high school students individually to convert older vehicles to electric as well as another high school project here in town. One of our members, Michael Golub, talked to you at a presentation at Chena Hot Springs earlier this year about his electric conversions. I will be giving a lecture on Electric Vehicle Technology next Thursday December the 13th at the Sand Lake Elementary School at 7-8:30pm. This was set up by someone at the Anchorage Parks & Rec Office. If you or a representative would like to attend I will present some ideas that could, at least in some small way, support projects you've announced future funding for on Education, Transportation and Alternative Energy proj ects.

Mike Willmon

Dear Governor Palin,

The original of this apparently went to the feds. I have no confirmation of anything about whether it is or is not true. I am planning a meeting with Svobodny for his thoughts. I just thought you should know about it. Talis

Mr. Cohen:

The intent of this letter is to share information with the proper authorities managing the case against Alaska Rep Vic Kohring others, and Bill Allen and Rick Smith of the Alaska based VECO Corporation. The reason for this letter is in response to their arrogance and boastfully stated disregard for the law.

Beginning on November 24, 2007, a large contingent of Allen family members joined together at the Bellagio Hotel in Las Vegas, Nevada. The good reason for the gathering was a birthday party of a granddaughter which we never saw. However the real reason for the gathering family members was to identify, organize and distribute Bill Allen's personal, financial and real properties among family members. He also told of his intent to remove his existing financial holding from the State of Alaska to two cities in New Mexico. This includes antique cars, properties, monies and the like. His intent is to eliminate any properties of value that may be lost from his finding of guilt. One of the properties is owned by Mark Allen, son of Bill Allen. The ranch is in Roswell New Mexico.

Sons, daughters, nephews, cousins, ex wife and the like were present and possibly assisted Allen in money laundering. It was discussed that large sums of money have been distributed. Record of their occupancy at the Bellagio should exist.

Some family members present were from various areas of the country including Durango Colorado,-Allen family members, Los Osos California, Lesley R. Mace family members, and Roswell, New Mexico, Mark Allen family members.
